The first solution is not possible for your PC because you can not access a computer in order to change the content in system32 folder. So, here is the second solution. Login to your safe drive and access system32 folder. Open the msocap.exe file, then go to properties->compatibility tab. There you can change the compatibility of your PC to the previous OS version. You must remove the old installation from the cd and use the cd to load the new software. Just be sure to save the new iso file on your hard drive and then load it to your cd using the software on it. You can load it in the same way you downloaded it. To load it to your cd use the software on it to burn it to the cd. You can't load it to the cd that is already in your pc. Hope this helped. I've done this on a PC that had Windows 2000 on it. Just open up the setup file, select "repair" under "windows," click on the CD that the setup file is on, select "next," and proceed. You have forgotten to press "OK" to continue after selecting to remove the old version of the software. You have 2 options: 1. To remove the old version without overwriting the files, you can just close the window without pressing "OK." When Windows installs the new version, it will detect that there was an older version of the software, and it will not overwrite any of the old files with the new version of the software. 2. To remove the old version and overwrite the existing files, just press "OK" and everything will be removed. This is also recommended in the event that you later decide you want to install 82157476af
